

In this event we will discuss:

- Brand new research on the concept of “Just Resilience,” a novel concept that draws on existing Just Transition frameworks to address justice concerns in adaptation action and the distribution of climate impacts.
- The intersection between Just Resilience and the prevention of maladaptation, to ensure adaptation policies protect the most vulnerable rather than unintentionally worsening their situation.
- How countries can develop fair adaptation plans that manage the distributional and procedural effects of adaptation action, ensuring that resilience is achieved in a just and equitable manner.
- Views from the Global South, sharing the lived experiences and innovative adaptation solutions of their countries, to help build more inclusive and context aware Just Resilience frameworks that better address the needs of those most affected by climate change.
- Practical ways to integrate Just Resilience into key UNFCCC discussions to ensure climate justice is at the heart of global climate action.

The event will bring together:

- Voices and perspectives from indigenous peoples, local governments, national policymakers, finance experts and researchers, offering a multi-layered approach to Just Resilience that reflects the diverse realities of climate adaptation.
