Panel No. 3: 15 minutes

Creating a just transition for the future of climate and world resilience and 1.5 degrees.

What options are we considering for all our futures? Advocating for future-justice and future-generations lens in climate action, so as to ensure that climate action does not harm current or future generations. To ensure a just transition, we should systemically integrate the rights of future generations and nature in climate action and the UNFCCC process. We will explore how gender justice, indigenous knowledge, and intergenerational equity can shape policies and agreements for future-just action.
