

ENSURING HUMAN RIGHTS IN CLIMATE CHANGE MITIGATION ACTIONS

Climate actions need to respect, protect and fulfill human rights. Past experiences with mechanisms established under the UNFCCC are critical for shaping the newly established Sustainable Development Mechanism (SDM). The event will reflect on lessons learnt from positive and negative impacts of climate mitigation actions. Speakers will underline the need for robust safeguards for future climate action and discuss the way forward. At the occasion of the event, a new report "Human rights implications of climate change mitigation actions" will be launched.

Wednesday 25 May, 2016

Room Berlin (112), Time: 16.45-18.15

Speakers:

- Human Rights implications of land-based mitigation actions,
KATE DOOLEY, University of Melbourne
- Human Rights implications of climate mitigation actions-lessons that need to be learnt,
JULIANE VOIGT, Carbon Market Watch
- Experience with the Barro Blanco dam in Panama
ALYSSA JOHL, Center for International Environmental Law (CIEL)

Panel:

- VICTORIA TAULI-CORPUZ, UN Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples
- Market expert (tbc)
- ALYSSA JOHL, CIEL
- JULIANE VOIGT, Carbon Market Watch