

Food Security Under Threat

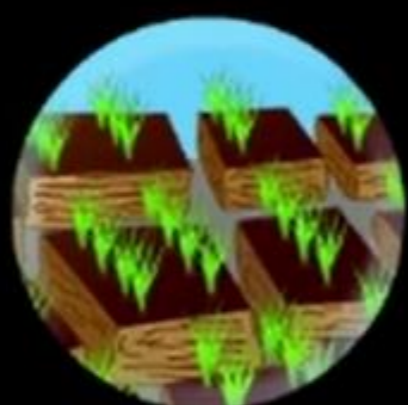

In East Africa, population growth deepens poverty and places increasing pressure on soils and ecosystems. Climate change heightens risks.

- Families need new strategies to protect natural resources, improve yields, diversify livelihoods and adapt to climate change.
- Many families want to avoid extra births but aren't using contraception.
- Better reproductive health services and livelihood options empower women.
- Multi-sectoral approaches better address complex interacting issues.

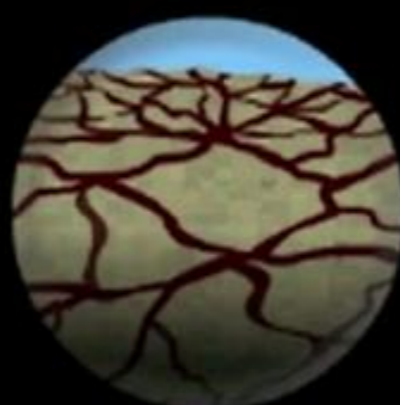

Deforestation

Smaller Farms

Drought

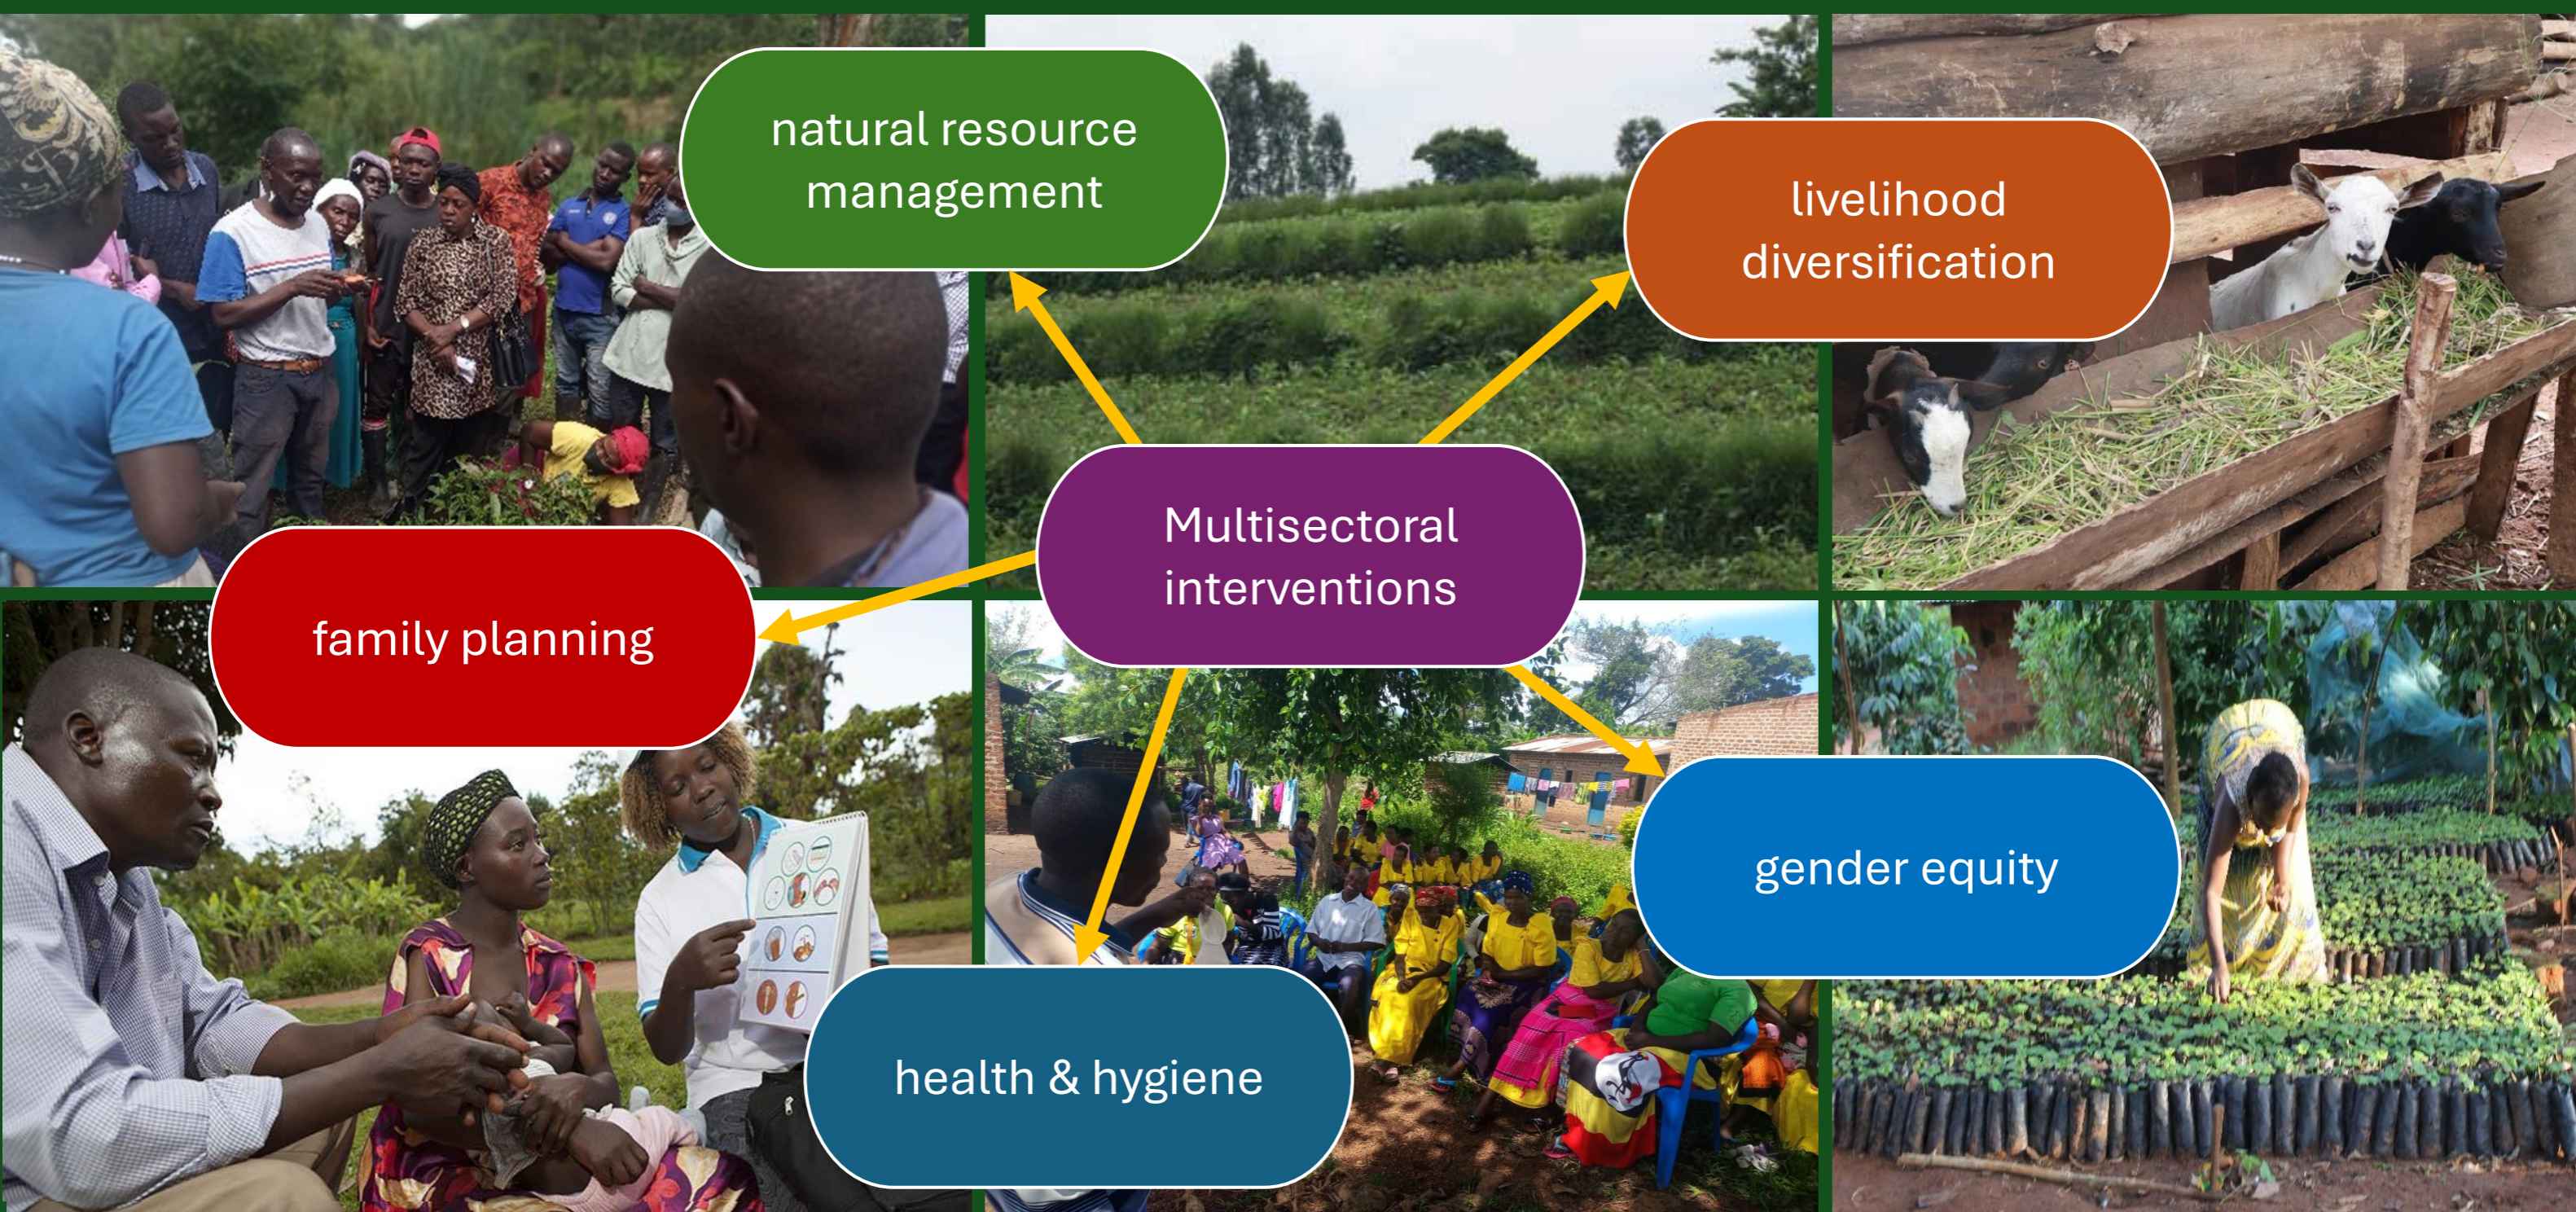

+

+

=

The Population, Health & Environment (PHE) approach

Healthy People &
Resilient Ecosystems
Project

